Molly Shepard is a licensed psychologist providing sexual offense-specific treatment and assessment services to adults in various capacities. She graduated from Palo Alto University's Clinical Psychology PhD program in 2020, completing the Forensic Psychology emphasis. She holds Oregon certifications as a Clinical Sexual Offense Therapist (CCSOT) and a Forensic Evaluator (CFE). She primarily works within the Oregon State Hospital's Sexual Offending Treatment Program (OSH's SOTP) wherein she provides psychodynamic-informed, evidence-based, sexual offense-specific individual treatment and conducts culturally-responsive psychosexual evaluations. She also supervises predoctoral psychology interns and clinicians seeking CCSOT at OSH. She contracts with Western Clinical & Forensic Services (WCFS), producing sexual risk, diagnostic, mitigation, and forensic evaluations, primarily for individuals in the pre-sentencing phase of legal resolution. Dr. Shepard serves as an at large board member of Oregon's ATSA chapter (OATSA). She routinely offers trainings in culturally-informed sexual offense-specific assessment through Safer Society and various ATSA chapters. Her primarily clinical and research interests involve sexual offending-specific treatment, assessment, and risk mitigation; supervision and training; cultural and language inclusivity; and kink, queer, and polyamorous identities.

Kate Crawford is a licensed psychologist and (CFE) for youth and adults. She obtained her terminal MA in Applied Psychological Sciences (2018) and later her PsyD in Clinical Psychology with Forensic Emphasis (2022) from Pacific University in Hillsboro, Oregon. Dr. Crawford provides care within OSH's SOTP, offering sexual offense-specific group and individual treatment, psychosexual evaluations, and specialty consultation for hospital policy development and interdisciplinary treatment teams. Within private practice, she contracts with Western Clinical & Forensic Services offering psychosexual, diagnostic, "extremely dangerous mentally ill person," and forensic evaluations. Dr. Crawford's professional interests include empowering neurodivergent communities, neurodivergent intersection with kink, and creative assessment and treatment interventions for Autistic individuals. She brings a dynamic and relationship-based (Interpersonal Reconstructive Therapy -IRT) orientation to her forensic treatment. Within sexual-offense work, she particularly enjoys evaluation and treatment for co-occurring Autism and problematic sexual behavior, and individuals with significant responsivity concerns involving attachment-based personality disorders.
